Challenge

For organizations moving to the cloud, there can be significant challenges related to migrating SAP solutions and custom applications to S/4HANA. Companies can have years of investments in time, resources and technology development in these assets, so it's critical to be able to reuse and future proof these custom solutions in the cloud.

With most companies accelerating their digital transformations, the importance of application development to business performance has grown significantly. A recent study of more than 400 companies has found a clear link between accelerating software innovation and company performance. For example, companies that can innovate faster have 60% higher total shareholder returns and 20% higher operating margins.*

JDC Group's BTP Development Services practice can help deliver the knowledge and expertise to help you plan, build or refactor, integrate, future proof and support these business-critical solutions in the cloud.
